Dear Families:

The first grading period is a short one – only 42 days – and we are feeling like we are just now getting into the meat of instruction. So if you feel your child’s progress report may not adequately reflect their potential, you could be right. Their current grade may only reflect a few tests or assignments, and some work may be incomplete – which means it is late therefore credit has not yet been given. This is a good check-in to see if your child is understanding concepts and completing work on time. Please reach out to your teacher now as the grading period ends October 7, and we will be holding Parent/Teacher Conferences on October 10. If we need to make adjustments, NOW is the time!

Mrs. Cook*
